

IMMIGRATION

Historically, the United States has been viewed as a safe haven for the world's political victims. As both Americans and Jews it is our moral obligation to ensure that human rights and the protection of human lives remain cornerstones of American foreign and domestic policy.

Hadassah, The Women's Zionist Organization of America, calls for the cessation of discriminatory immigration policies, including the forced return, without appeal, of refugees seeking safe asylum from political repression and turmoil in their native countries.

Hadassah supports the nondiscriminatory application of United States immigration legislation and attendant policies, without regard to an individual's race, religion, ethnicity, national origin or monetary status.