A CONVERSATION WITH TRACY GUZEMAN

"The Gravity of Birds" is part psychological drama, part mystery, and part love story. A tale of warring sisters, a missing work of art, and the journey taken by two men charged with finding a painting and returning it to its rightful owner. But it's also a story of how the past tends to unravel the present.

Tracy Guzeman's debut novel, "The Gravity of Birds", was published by Simon & Schuster in 2013, with translation rights sold in eleven other countries. Her short fiction has been published in Vestal Review, Glimmer Train, and Gulf Coast, where her story, "Einstein," received honorable mention for the Donald Barthelme Prize for Short Prose. She was a featured author for the 2014 Twitter Fiction Festival, and is a Pushcart Prize nominee. Her work has been performed by both Stories on Stage and the New Short Fiction Series. She is currently working on her second novel.
