5-year-old Saved After Deadly Bacteria Attack

TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 2016

News About Hadassah Hospital Mount Scopus

A, a 5-year-old boy, came home from kindergarten with a high fever and a rash, complaining of throbbing knee pain. Meirav, his mother, took A to the family doctor who recommended acetaminophen. After taking the medicine, A's temperature went down, but by the next morning it was back. Even worse, A couldn't walk.

The family doctor was concerned and didn't like the unusual rash that had developed on A's body. He insisted that the family go to an emergency room immediately. Meirav rushed A to Hadassah Hospital Mount Scopus because of the excellent pediatric emergency rooms. The ER team suspected a serious infection and sprang into action: a spinal tap and blood tests and treatments for invasive meningococcal disease were requested.

When the culture was analyzed, the results confirmed the doctors' hunch that A had invasive meningococcal disease, also known as cerebrospinal meningitis, a contagious illness caused by the bacterium Neisseria Meningitidis. In this rare and often fatal disease, the membranes that cover the brain and spinal cord become inflamed. The disease spreads so quickly that even those who manage to survive may be left with disabilities that include deafness, brain damage, and neurological problems. Babies, children, and teens are at a greater risk of death.

"Every year, children die from this disease. We have reported the case to the Ministry of Health to figure out where such a dangerous bacterium came from," said Prof. Yackov Berkun, head of the Pediatrics Department at Hadassah Hospital Mount Scopus and a subspecialist in Pediatric Rheumatology.

Meningococcal disease is also contagious. All who were in close or prolonged contact with A, classmates and members of his family, have to be examined and will remain under close supervision. There is a prophylactic treatment but not a vaccine for the strain of bacteria that A had.

"It's a rare disease and extremely dangerous," said Prof. Berkun. "We were handling a medical emergency. We were deeply concerned, but pleased to see [the infected child] responding to the early and correct treatment." A, while still receiving medication, was released from the hospital after a two-week hospitalization with a good prognosis.

"We are so fortunate that we came to Hadassah Hospital Mount Scopus. This was a miracle. We can't thank the fast-acting and professional staff enough," said Meirav.

Meeting Scheduling Notes

Due to the Jewish Holidays, there will be NO program meetings in October.

Effective immediately, morning program meetings will be held only in November, January, February and March.

A Reminder for Annual Members: Don't Miss Out

Take advantage of National Hadassah's life membership promotion and upgrade your membership for $180 instead of $212. Any type of annual membership can be upgraded to life by December 31, 2016 as long as your annual membership has not expired. For example, if you were gifted an annual membership in August of 2015, your membership would expire in August 2016. If you have been an annual member for some time, your renewal date in 2016 would be the time to upgrade to life.

If you have any questions about this special or your expiration date, please contact Adele Smith at delly85018@yahoo.com.

To make this even more enticing to do NOW, the cost for a life membership will go up to $250 as of January 1, 2017.

Highlighting Atria Sierra Pointe

We are delighted to report on a relatively new HVOS group at Atria Sierra Pointe. These women, living in a Senior Retirement Complex, have begun holding monthly meetings to keep the women abreast of the world of Hadassah. These Life Members were involved with Hadassah for many years in their respective homes throughout the United States. They have participated in our earning funds and have personally traveled to Israel to see the fruits of their labor. Now, as interested and vital seniors, they attend meetings, purchase Hadassah cards and certificates and have a Tzdekah box available for donations. Hats off to these wonderful women!!
