Glen Caruso is a husband and father of 4 daughters. He and his wife Alison live in East Cobb and have been married for 18 years. Born in Long Island, Glen moved to the south a number years ago, bringing with him an assorted number of pots and pans. While he's learned to love biscuits and gravy, his Italian roots have helped hone his ability to make a mean marinara. Glen's motto about his "gravy"? "If it's good enough for the Godfather, it's good enough for my family and friends!"

Andy Stenmark is a proud husband and father. Born of Norwegian descent, Andy grew up with a love of cooking. The proud owner of not one, but two, Green Egg smokers, this man makes a brisket to rival Carnegie Deli. You need julienne fries? Call Andy! Want to know the subtle differences between Saffron and Sage? Ask Chef Stenmark! Debating gas versus electric for your kitchen remodel? Andy will know the best type of heat for your souffle, sauces and saltimbocca.
