

WHO WILL SAY KADDISH?

HADASSAH PERPETUAL YAHRZEIT

The setting is magnificent: the breathtaking Chagall windows surrounding the synagogue depict the deathbed blessings that Jacob bestowed on each of his 12 sons. The sons became the founders of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. (Gen. 49:1-27)

When a loved one dies...

Jews have recited Kaddish following the death of a loved one since the Middle Ages. This prayer is a cornerstone of Jewish faith and in all circles of the Jewish community is considered to be the finest way to memorialize departed loved ones. Written primarily in Aramaic, the Kaddish prayer never mentions death or mourning. Instead it proclaims the greatness of God and reaffirms the goodness of life.

Kaddish is said for the first time following burial. Then tradition calls for Kaddish to be recited daily for the next eleven months. Forever after, it is said annually on the anniversary of the death: the “Yahrzeit.” On this day each year we honor the departed, recalling the beauty of their life and the sweetness they added to ours.

Kaddish in Jerusalem

Whatever the future may bring, you can ensure that your loved one will be remembered each year in Israel, on the anniversary of their death according to the Hebrew calendar. On that day, the name of the departed, and the comforting words of Kaddish, will be recited in the Fannie and Maxwell Abbell Synagogue at Hadassah Medical Center in Ein Kerem, Jerusalem, beneath Marc Chagall’s 12 beautiful and iconic stained glass windows.

Donors establishing a Yahrzeit will receive a beautiful Hadassah certificate featuring illustrated artwork inspired by the Chagall windows that adorn the Abbell Synagogue.
